Schools Guide 2018

This is not a school for 'far-flung, wealthy and competitive tiger mums', emphasises one parent. It is non-selective and offers the dreamy combination of a French curriculum with British values. The only hiccup: there were nearly 600 names on the waiting list last year, so register early—places are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. Fencing is exceedingly popular, rugby has been introduced from Year 3, and the school is now nicely established on the netball circuit. Three-quarters of the school have a French passport, but there are jolly camping trips to Devon and cricket matches to educate them on the thrills and spills of a British education. A good chunk head off to the Lycée Français and the rest to places like Ibstock, Hampton and Emanuel.
