Schools Guide 2019

The most 'British' of the French schools in London, L'Ecole largely follows the French curriculum but adds several British twists, for example art classes, netball and a house system ('Go Vikings!' says our pupil insider). Register from the maternity ward because there's a 300 strong waiting list, but don't worry if your sprog is not bilingual on day one—they will be by Year 6. It's a discreet location with a bright, light feel inside—they repaint top-to-toe every summer. Most parents are local and there's a daily bus from South Ken and Fulham. EPC (English Preparation Courses) are on offer for the roughly 40 percent of pupils who don't go on to the French Lycée. 'What's next?' we asked Principal Brisset. 'Survive Brexit!' she replied.
